Gourmet chow comes to the Linc

Eagles. The 2015 season is coming and delicious new food options will be on the menu.

It's stadium food — but it doesn't taste like stadium food.

That's the focus for new concessions at Lincoln Financial Field for the Eagles' upcoming season — that it tastes authentic and homemade, from their Sunday gravy to slow-roasted pork. The twist is that you're not at your grandmother's house in South Philly — you're at an Eagles game.

Chef Marc Vetri and his team from Pizzeria Vetri teamed up with Aramark to release a new pizza at the stadium location. They will have a new seasonal vegetarian taglio. The Fall Spinach Taglio will be available for the home opener, with fresh house-made sauce, mozzarella, baby spinach, ricotta cheese, Reggiano Parmesan and fresh basil.

"We're going to rotate this year with three different pies," James Hennessey, executive chef for Aramark at Lincoln Financial Field, said. "We work very closely with those guys to ensure the fact that if you go to Pizzeria Vetri, you're going to get it the same way here at Lincoln Financial Field. Everything — the process, the dough — it's all made in-house and it's all their recipes."

Vetri is renowned for his pizza, which Food & Wine Magazine hailed as one of the best in the United States.

Other menu items showcase some of the best that Philly has to offer with accommodations. Chef Hennessy and his team have gluten-free bread from Sweet Christine's at the ready, and the stadium has received accolades in the past for vegetarian options.

Whether someone travels to Philly for a game or needs to know what this city is all about, Chef James has his pick of what to eat while at the stadium. Hint: It's a sandwich. But probably not the one that you're expecting.

"The Arista — the roast pork sandwich — is starting to take over as the Philadelphia sandwich," says Hennessey. "It really represents what this city is about: hard working, blue collar, loves a good sandwich. Something to get all the juices flowing with the spicy and the broccoli rabe for bitterness, and then the sharp provolone. It's definitely a home run in that aspect."

Chef James' other must-try sandwich is the Beef Brisket Meatball. Yes, the meatballs are cooked in Sunday gravy.

Lastly, don't miss the new Chipotle Macaroni and Cheese at Quick & Carmichael's BBQ. Housemade cheese sauce mixes in with elbow pasta and gets topped with Cool Ranch Doritos for a personalized twist. You can also top it with black cherry smoked pulled pork or ample sugar smoked chicken to incorporate the barbecue taste.

Leak

Philadelphia city workers' emails appear in Ashley Madison hack

City government workers may have been using their government email addresses to cheat on their spouses.

Nine email addresses with phila.gov extensions were included in a dump of hacked user data from the website Ashleymadison.com. Ten email addresses ended in "pa.gov."

Hackers on Wednesday released a huge batch of data from the website, which helps people who want to have extramarital affairs find willing partners. The data had identifying details, including credit card information and email addresses.

A Twitter user identified as @t0x0pg analyzed how many email addresses ended in .gov or .mil. The results turned up thousands of employees of the government and the military — raising fears by some security experts that the results could be used for blackmail.

It's unclear whether any of the email addresses traced to Philadelphia city employees hold sensitive positions.

The city is trying to see whether any employees accessed the site through their city-owned computers, a spokesman said.

Sara and Jose Serrano. Their son Jose was a seminarian when he died of cancer. / DAN KELLEY

More men in Philly going into Catholic priesthood

The Francis factor. The jump in seminarians might have something to do with the papal visit.

The bishop in charge of training priests in the Archdiocese of Philadelphia said Wednesday that overall enrollment at the school is up 21 percent over last year, a rise that may have something to do with Pope Francis' September visit.

Enrollment at St. Charles Seminary has gone from 120 to 145. It features 20 new men from the archdiocese entering seminary this year — that's a big jump from last year when there were just six and previous years when the incoming class hovered around 10, Bishop Timothy C. Senior said.

"Young people are increasingly opting for a life of service," Senior said.

The diocese will launch a campaign to recruit new priests this fall, which has long been a struggle for the modern church. In recent years, the archdiocese announced plans to sell off a portion of the seminary's property to developers.

In November, they will start asking parishioners to fill out cards naming men who might be suited for the priesthood.

They also have a slick new recruitment video featuring the story of Jose Serrano, a seminarian who died of cancer before being ordained.

"I think that God ordained Jose on his death bed through his suffering," Sara Serrano, Jose's mother, said. "He'd just look at me and say all I want is to be a holy priest."

The 20 aspirant priests are only those from the Archdiocese of Philadelphia. But St. Charles educates priests from other dioceses and also educates graduate students.

The Ernest Opinion

ERNEST OWENS

AWARD-WINNING MULTIMEDIA JOURNALIST ERNEST OWENS IS A KEEN OBSERVER OF SOCIAL, LGBT AND RACE ISSUES IN PHILADELPHIA. FOLLOW HIM @MRERNESTOWENS

PHILLY HAS A BLACK MILLENNIAL IDENTITY CRISIS

Frequently, I attend a couple of black "millennial" outreach happy hours across Philly. What initially was a way for me to establish a social network of peers my age has now become a spectacle of a generational gap that's painful to watch.

For me, millennials are defined as young adults ages 18 to 30, who are either first-time voters and/or entry-level professionals/postgraduate students. The oldest millennials' inaugural vote was for President Obama during his first term; the youngest members will finally be able to vote in next year's election.

Millennials aren't seasoned elected officials or attorneys with close to six-figure paychecks. They are also not individuals who could hire me on the spot. So what are they doing at my happy hours?

For young black professionals in Philly, politics run deep within the collective social network. Given the high density of black elected officials, a good number of them use these events to "connect" with a younger demographic.

What I once assumed was a great way to be informed and engaged, I now realize has become a platform for excessive campaigning and self-promotion.

For one, there are too many black millennial networks in the city that are attracting the same number of people each time. I go to one and I, seriously, have met everyone else. So what true benefit will it do for us young adults?

Answer: not a damn thing.

Being the intrigued observer that I am, I'm now convinced that many of these social groups are tailored to recruit campaign volunteers and get photo-ops. It's a cheap and easy way to tell voters and constituents that you are in the community without actually being there.

People shake hands. / TALENT EGG

Former mayoral candidate Doug Oliver made the mistake of trying to pitch a millennial platform he assumed would actually spark a strong young voter turnout. Yet regardless of how he tried to identify as a millennial in spite of his corporate executive positions and deep City Hall connections, we weren't buying it.

This new buzz term "millennial" hasn't become another way only for older adults to find ways to exploit our demographic, but also for individuals in my own age group as well.

At 23, I can truly say that the number of people my age aspiring to throw their name in to a local election race is as rapid as it is tragic. And their way of standing out: by creating millennial PACs that suck up the little money I have left for a happy hour.

Behind closed doors some millennials are capitalizing off of their own demographic to raise funds for their own political ambitions.

Overpriced social dinners and galas to raise funds to support their missions are now being exposed as campaign fundraisers in disguise.

Well, I personally want no part of this debauchery and youth exploitation. I'm calling on all like-minded millennials in this city to start requesting your cocktails with a shot of honesty and no politics.

Benefit. Roller derby to support wounded friend at Riverrink

Danecia Berrian at a roller derby game / TOM IGOE

The roller derby player who was wounded in a shocking domestic violence case will get some support from friends and teammates during a fundraiser Friday at the Delaware River Waterfront.

The Philly Roller Derby originally just planned a 10th anniversary party at Riverrink, but it became a fundraiser for 37-year-old Danecia Berrian, known in derby as Nina Knockout, after she was critically wounded along with her infant daughter three weeks ago during an attack allegedly by her husband.

"There has been this outpouring of love since then," said Kristen Herrmann, vice president of Philly Roller Derby. "What better than to have everybody [come] together ... especially with her being one of the founding first members of our league?"

Herrmann recalled Berrian's performance with Philly's Liberty Belles when they trounced New York team Gotham in a tournament as particularly legendary.

"She's huge in the world of derby," Herrmann said. "She knows it's going to be a long recovery, but she's doing well."

The fundraiser/anniversary party begins at 7 p.m. Aug. 21 at the Riverrink.

All proceeds from the party will go to Berrian's family.

Berrian's husband, Stephen Burton, is in custody and faces charges of attempted murder for the incident. SAM NEWHOUSE

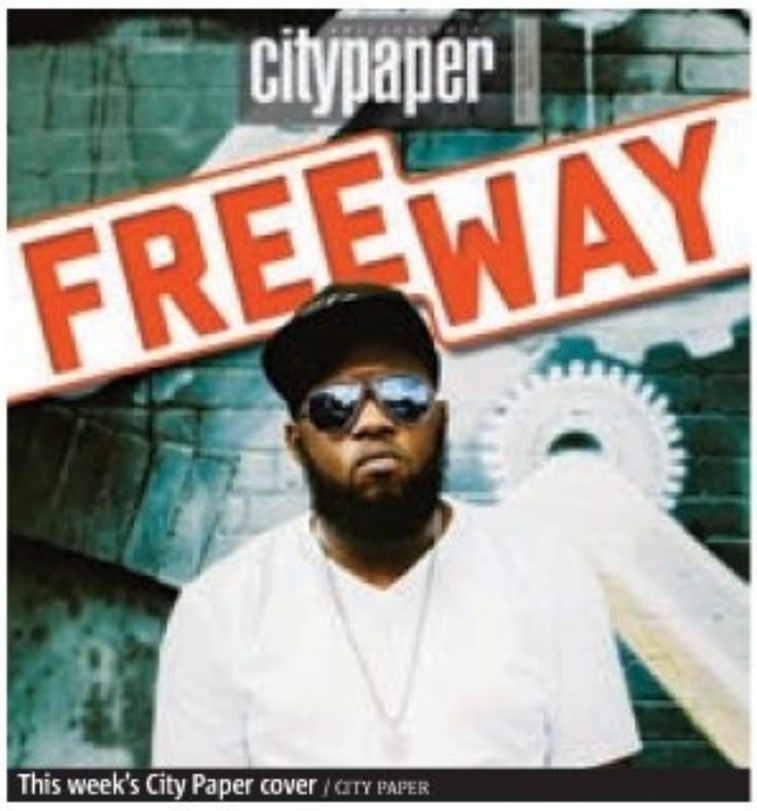
This week. The best of City Paper: Rapper Freeway talks new work

In a cover story interview, Philadelphia rapper Freeway talks about coming off one of the most productive years since his State Property chart-topping days. His "Broken Ankles" EP with Pittsburgh DJ/producer Girl Talk has introduced his rhymes to a whole new audience.

He's stretched his entrepreneurial muscles with the launch of his new Best Beard Cream. He lent his voice to the concert celebration when old pal Beanie Sigel returned to the stage after his long hospitalization.

And with the release of a new album, "Free Will," and touring dates with Sigel, the next 12 months promise to be even more exciting.

In other highlights, local cartoonist Terry LaBan returns to the Penn & Ink page with "Popenado!" — a color comic about Philly's very palpable prepontiff panic. We are not ready.



This week's City Paper cover / CITY PAPER

In news, staff writer Jerry Iannelli describes the summer-long tensions over a City Council bill that would put limits on the number of food trucks at Drexel University.

In food, when Stephen Starr opened SquareBurger in 2009, the Cake Shake — a vanilla milkshake infused with Tastykake Butterscotch Krimpets — stole the show.

These and other stories can be found in City Paper and on citypaper.net.

Fresh racial unrest

St. Louis police shoot and kill black suspect

Police shot and killed a black man in St. Louis on Wednesday in a killing that drew angry crowds.

St. Louis Police Chief Sam Dotson said the shooting took place as officers were attempting to execute a search warrant in a crime-ridden neighborhood, when two young black men ran out the back door of the targeted house.

Police officers confronted the suspects in the alley behind the house and one suspect pointed a gun at officers, who then fired approximately four times, killing him, Dotson said.

Despite the police explanation of events, dozens of people gathered near the scene protesting.

Police in SWAT gear and an armored vehicle ordered the crowd to disperse; some were taken into custody. REUTERS

Former Subway pitchman Fogle charged with paying for sex with minors, possessing child porn

Sandwich chain. Subway fired Fogle on Tuesday when reports of the plea agreement emerged.

Former Subway sandwich chain pitchman Jared Fogle asked a federal judge on Wednesday to accept his plea of guilty to charges of child pornography and traveling for illicit paid sex with minors.

Federal Judge Mark Dinsmore must now review the plea deal Fogle's attorneys reached with prosecutors and decide whether to accept it. In the meantime the court entered a technical plea of not guilty on Fogle's behalf.

Fogle, who became famous after losing a lot of weight on a diet that included Subway sandwiches, was placed on home detention and must wear an electronic monitoring device. No date has been set for his next appearance.

According to the charges, Russell Taylor, head of the Jared Foundation set up to combat child obesity, secretly taped 12 minors while they changed clothes and showered at his home, including two who were as young as 13 or 14. He shared the images with Fogle, who knew they showed minors, prosecutors said.

Prosecutors said Fogle also received commercial child pornography from Taylor, viewed it and failed to report it. He stored explicit images of children as young as six.

Fogle traveled to New York City at least twice between 2010 and 2013 seeking sex with minors, and paid for sex acts with a girl he knew to be 17 years old and another girl younger than 18. He told the first girl he would "make it worth her while" if she could find him another minor to have sex with, "the younger the girl, the better," according to the indictment.

Prosecutors said he repeatedly asked prostitutes and others to find him 14- and 15-year-olds for sex. REUTERS

Years in prison

Under the deal, Fogle would serve between five and 12 years in prison, pay $1.4 million in restitution to 14 minor victims and register as a sex offender.

1 Hackers' Ashley Madison data dump wreaks havoc

Love lives and reputations may be at risk after the release of customer data from infidelity website Ashley Madison on Tuesday, a dramatic move likely to rattle users' attitude toward the Internet.

Hackers dumped a big cache of data containing millions of email addresses for U.S. government officials, U.K. civil servants and high-level executives at European and North American corporations late on Tuesday, the latest cyberattack to raise concerns about Internet security and data protection.

Identifying members of a marital cheating website appeared aimed at maximum damage to the individuals, causing public embarrassment and potentially hurting relationships, rather than financial gain.

Last month, the hackers threatened to leak nude photos, sexual fantasies, real names and credit card information for as many as 37 million customers worldwide of Ashley Madison, which uses the slogan "Life is short. Have an affair."

Twitter was abuzz, with "hack" trending in fourth place. Most comments expressed horror that people's identities were exposed and many were astonished people had apparently used their work emails to sign up to the site. REUTERS

2 Atlantic may see first 2015 hurricane as Danny strengthens

Tropical Storm Danny is on track to become the first hurricane of the 2015 Atlantic season by Friday and could approach the Caribbean islands by the late weekend, the U.S. National Hurricane Center said.

It is still too early to predict whether Danny, currently a tropical storm with winds gusting up to 50 miles per hour, will impact the United States, said Dennis Feltgen, a meteorologist and spokesman for the hurricane center in Miami.

Danny is the fourth named storm of what is expected to be a quieter-than-normal Atlantic hurricane season, he said. REUTERS

3 Wildfires trigger new evacuation in Northwest

Wildfires raging across the U.S. Northwest triggered new evacuation orders for hundreds of homes as firefighters battled more than a dozen major blazes across drought-parched western states, authorities said on Wednesday.

The blazes have blackened more than 1 million acres across the arid region, prompting fire managers to call in help from the U.S. Army and abroad. REUTERS

4 13-year-old may face trial as adult in death of toddler

A 13-year-old Tulsa boy has been charged with child abuse murder in the death of his 2-year-old cousin and may be tried as an adult for the crime, prosecutors said

The 13-year-old was charged on Tuesday for the death of Charity Simmons in Tulsa in June. Medical examiners said the death was caused by violent blunt force trauma.

Suspects aged 13 or 14 can be charged in Oklahoma as an adult as long as they are first certified as a youthful offender. A judge will have to decide whether the 13-year-old will face trial as an adult, prosecutors said. REUTERS

5 Man charged with trying to halt departing Denver plane

A 58-year-old man who arrived late for a flight to attend his high school reunion is accused of running onto a concourse at Denver International Airport in an attempt to stop the departing plane, prosecutors said.

Marc Rehmar is charged with one count of endangering public transportation, a felony, and one misdemeanor count of hindering transportation, Lynn Kimbrough, spokeswoman for the Denver District Attorney's Office, said. REUTERS

Istanbul palace attacked, eight soldiers are killed

Violence. There was no claim of responsibility for the attack at Dolmabahce Palace.

Gunmen fired on police outside an Istanbul palace and a bomb killed eight soldiers in the southeast on Wednesday, heightening a sense of crisis as Turkey's leaders struggled to form a new government.

The Istanbul governor's office said two members of a "terrorist group" armed with hand grenades and an automatic rifle were caught after attacking the Dolmabahce Palace, which is popular with tourists.

Militants from the Kurdistan Workers Party (PKK), meanwhile, killed eight soldiers with a roadside bomb in the southeastern province of Siirt, the military said, intensifying a conflict there after the breakdown of a two-year cease-fire last month.

Shortly before the bomb attack, Turkish F-16 warplanes had hit and destroyed PKK shelters along Turkey's border with Iraq, the Hurriyet newspaper said. The report could not immediately be confirmed.

The unrest in the NATO member state comes weeks after it declared a "war on terror," opening up its air bases to the U.S.-led coalition against Islamic State, launching air strikes on Kurdish militants, and detaining more than 2,500 suspected members of radical Kurdish, far-leftist and Islamist groups. Migrants. Ferry packed with Syrian refugees heads for Greece

A passenger ship carrying hundreds of Syrian refugees was heading to the Greek mainland from islands in the Aegean Sea on Wednesday amid confusion over its final destination and the fate of passengers.

On top of its economic crisis, cash-strapped Greece has been battling a huge influx of migrants arriving by boat from neighboring Turkey in recent weeks. About 21,000 people landed on Greek shores last week alone, prompting Athens to appeal to the European Union for help.

"It's certain that if there is no intervention from the United Nations [or] the European Union ... Greece will have a slow-burning bomb at its foundations, and everyone should understand that," said civil protection minister Yiannis Panousis.

Officials initially said the ship, which has acted as a floating accommodation and registration center since Sunday, was heading for the northern port of Thessaloniki. But the coast guard later said it was expected to arrive in Athens on Thursday morning. REUTERS

Aircraft. 3-D printed drone launched from Royal Navy warship

A team of engineers from the University of Southampton launched a 3-D printed unmanned aerial vehicle (UAV) from the bow of a Royal Navy warship in a bid to demonstrate the potential use of lightweight drones at sea.

After being launched from HMS Mersey off the Dorset coast in the south of England, the UAV was flown autonomously on a preprogrammed route before landing on Chesil Beach.

Known as the Southampton University Laser Sintered Aircraft, the drone weighed 6.6 pounds with a wingspan of nearly 4.9 feet. The airframe was created on a 3-D printer using laser-sintered nylon, which uses a laser to fuse nylon powder into solid structures. It's printed in four major parts and can be assembled without the use of any tools.

The research was led by scientists and engineers from the University of Southampton under the name Project Triangle. In 2011, they initially tested the world's first entirely printed aircraft.

Professor Andy Keane, from Engineering and the Environment at the University of Southampton, said the use of UAVs will continue to increase as production costs shrink and materials become more reliable. Their rugged airframes and use of 3-D printed nylon, he said, advanced design thinking. REUTERS

Japan cargo ship embarks on International Space Station supply mission

Arrival time. It will take the capsule five days to reach the station.

After three botched missions to resupply the International Space Station since October, an unmanned cargo ship blasted off from southern Japan on Wednesday with food, water and gear needed to keep the research station and its crew functioning.

A 19-story H-2B rocket lifted off from the Tanegashima Space Center at 1150 GMT and put the HTV capsule into orbit 15 minutes later, a NASA Television broadcast showed.

Japanese astronaut Kimiya Yui, who arrived at the outpost last month, will use the station's robot arm on Monday to pluck the capsule from orbit and anchor it to the Harmony module.

The two U.S. supply ships, operated by Orbital ATK and privately owned SpaceX, remain grounded following launch accidents on Oct. 28 and June 28, respectively. Russia's Progress freighter, one of which failed to reach the station in April, resumed flights last month. REUTERS

Kristen Stewart won a Cesar, the French equivalent of the Oscar, for the European drama "Clouds of Sils Maria."
IFC FILMS

Why Kristen Stewart is a great actress

THE FUN STARTS HERE

Do you hate on that girl from "Twilight"? You shouldn't. She's a serious thespian.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Before she scored the "Twilight" gig, Kristen Stewart was simply a young actress. Among her first wave of raves was for a small but key part in "Into the Wild" — a role that acclaimed French filmmaker Olivier Assayas ("Carlos") said made him want to work with her. Assayas would belatedly cast Stewart in "Clouds of Sils Maria," which netted her a Cesar — the French equivalent of the Oscar — for Best Supporting Actress earlier this year. She was the first American to get the accolade.

Around the time of "Into the Wild"'s release in the fall of 2007, Stewart landed the coveted role of Bella Swan in "Twilight" when she was just 17. Her life was never the same again, and not exactly for good. Her existence became a nonstop surveillance hellsuck, her every move documented, her talk show appearances obsessively scrutinized, her sex life salivated upon by every publication.

Perhaps worse, her brand suffered. Critics and non-Twi-hard audiences quickly turned to pouncing on Stewart, the star of a beloved but critically dreadful franchise that called on her to swoon for a pale vampire and an often shirtless werewolf hunk.

Right now, it's surprising that Stewart won a fancy European acting award, and for a movie that's 80 percent her onscreen with French icon Juliette Binoche. But it shouldn't be surprising. Stewart has always been a unique screen presence — a thespian of great subtlety.

GETTY IMAGES

Granted, sometimes her minimalist approach — those very, very tiny scrunches of the eyes or slight modulations of where her jaw rests — has been interpreted as mere vacuity. Perhaps her early public appearances didn't help. On talk shows she often seemed detached — or at least she wasn't yet comfortable with a profoundly inhuman form of interaction few of her fans or detractors could ever imagine.

As she's gotten older, Stewart has become more articulate, more bold, more confident and more easily vexed, especially when it comes to her privacy. She has a type, much the way classic Hollywood actors had types, upon which they'd do slight variations.

This week sees the release of "American Ultra." Jesse Eisenberg plays a sleeper-agent-turned-burner who doesn't remember he has Jason Bourne moves until they're awoken. Stewart plays his equally hard-toking girlfriend who helps him as they flee assassins.

The movie has tonal issues; some actors are broad, some serious. Stewart is on the serious side. She brings real, deep feeling to a character with real, deep love for her partner. She shoots characters hard, anguished stares. She does a lot with very little. She's not particularly funny in this sorta-comedy, nor is she asked to be. She's the film's rock — the power that gives it more weight than it perhaps deserves. This shouldn't be surprising, and it shouldn't be think piece-worthy. After all, she has a Cesar, bitches.

The best of KStew

'Clouds of Sils Maria'
Stewart plays the personal assistant of a harried, aging actress (Juliette Binoche) who, like Stewart herself, was once a hot young thing.

'Still Alice'
Not only did she hold her own with Binoche; Stewart held her own with Julianne Moore as well, watching in horror as the Oscar winner is slowly undone by Alzheimer's.

'Camp X-Ray'
As a Gitmo guard who befriends one of the detainees ("A Separation"'s fantastic Peyman Moaadi), Stewart brings subtlety and nuance to a subject that needs it.

'The Runaways'
Turns out Stewart does a mean young Joan Jett.

'Panic Room'
As a tomboyish teen, Stewart got her big break in David Fincher's home invasion thriller, playing daughter to Jodie Foster, a child actor-turned-adult star just like her.

Patrick Stewart doesn't want to offend

The acclaimed actor can't wait for "Blunt Talk" to let him get his Jon Stewart on.

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

In "Blunt Talk," Patrick Stewart plays a news anchor who at one point dreams that he's in a Busby Berkeley-style musical number. STARZ

Sir Patrick Stewart is a proud Brooklynite, but he was out of town for most of last winter, in Los Angeles shooting "Blunt Talk," which premiers on Starz Saturday at 9 p.m. He plays a political news anchor of the Piers Morgan variety, only more prone to drug use.

GETTY IMAGES

The first episode involves a trans-gender character, but it doesn't go for cheap laughs.

It's due to Jonathan [Ames'] own experiences and his sensitivity. We were both a little nervous about how it might appear. The scene becomes sweet, almost sentimental, where it could have been broad and coarse and offensive. I don't think it is.

In the first four episodes, it's not so much a political show as it is about characters.

You're a New Yorker, but it's interesting this show takes place in L.A. That's a different vibe, and the kind of satire is not the same as it would be in New York.

We spent a lot of time talking about that — "New York or L.A., where should it be?" I felt that L.A. — with no offense to Manhattan — offered perhaps more exotic potential to tell Walter's story. Also, I was here on Broadway doing a play all the way through the winter season of 2013-2014 ["No Man's Land," with Ian McKellen]. And it was, at that time, the second-worst winter on record. I swore I would not live through it again. Then, as it proved, last winter was the worst winter on record. It was so pleasant in California. Weekends I would get up in January and put on a pair of shorts and flip-flops. I felt a little bad about my friends back here in Manhattan, struggling through the winter.

I hope in time it will be seen to be both. We spent a lot of time — Jonathan, rather, did — building all the characters, giving them substance. I would like to see it get more political — because I am and have been all my life. I'd like to start banging the desk a little bit in a Jon Stewart manner. I've been practicing my Jon Stewart gestures for when that moment comes.

'American Ultra'

Director: Nima Nourizadeh
Stars: Jesse Eisenberg, Kristen Stewart
Rating: R

Jesse Eisenberg and Kirsten Stewart enjoy a brief respite in the action-comedy "American Ultra," playing perpetually toking lovers trying to stay alive. ALAN MARKFIELD

"American Ultra" is what could be called a "theoretical movie." It certainly sounds like a good time. The hook is that Jesse Eisenberg — gentle, shy and here a stoner — kills people. He's Mike, a burner in small town Louisiana who's also, unbeknownst to himself, a sleeper agent for the CIA, fighting to stay alive when a hissable official (Topher Grace) sends assassins to take him out. And yet "American Ultra" mostly sits there on the screen. It's like a good joke ruined by clumsy telling.

Part of that is tone; part of that is a crisis of identity. It wants to be a silly, cartoonishy violent action-comedy in which Eisenberg kills people with spoons and dispenses head trauma and (gulp) teeth trauma. It also wants to be a sensitive, serious, "indie" look at a relationship — between Mike and Phoebe, played by his "Adventureland" crush Kristen Stewart — starring two actors overqualified for low-rent silliness. It's two movies: one a broad, bloody farce, the other an "indie" drama that fumbles bringing the tomfoolery down to earth.

Oddly, it's the serious side that comes closer to working. The comedy vies for "Veep"-style cynicism, but it mostly seems like a bad imitation. Grace spends most of the film just deploying f-bombs, inelegantly and artlessly, like a little boy who just discovered cuss words. Even the gimmick of the guy from "The End of the Tour" whipping out leftfield hurtbombs becomes repetitive.

Eisenberg, to his credit, doesn't overplay the shtick. He's trying to play a real character, though there's not a ton of character to play. Nor is there with Phoebe, who as written is little more than The Girlfriend (With a Pretty Guessable Secret). Stewart isn't particularly funny here, but what she does is bring a real depth of feeling. She and Eisenberg may help kill the comedy, but they elevate the secondhand drama into something briefly worthwhile. MP

‘Sinister 2’ has no scares but is so-so as a domestic drama

‘Sinister 2’

Director: Ciaran Foy
Stars: James Ransone, Shannyn Sossamon

With a lot of tossed-off horror entries, especially cheapie sequels to cheapie fluke hits like “Sinister 2,” the best way to watch them is to watch the stuff that isn’t about scares — the business bubbling underneath. There isn’t much of even that in “Sinister 2.” It’s a thematic muddle with little on its mind. It’s not even mostly about chills so much as it is a Lifetime movie, one about domestic abuse, that occasionally remembers there’s a scary ghost afoot.

The newest victims are Courtney (Shannyn Sossamon) and her twin boys (Robert Daniel Sloan and Dartanian Sloan), who incur the wrath of “Bughuul,” the vengeful sprite who likes to coax children into massacring their family and preserving it on 8mm film.

After the grueling pessimism of the first, the fact that the horror this round is more of an afterthought is a perverse relief. “Sinister 2” parcels out Bughuul’s previous greatest hits like rancid dog biscuits to get us through the main story. Still, Sossamon can be touching as a woman trying to keep her cool while evil swirls around her.

Sights like these are all over the mountain climbing doc "Meru." MUSIC BOX FILMS

'Meru'

Directors: Jimmy Chin, Elizabeth Chai Vasarhelyi
Genre: Documentary
Rating: NR

What's crazier than scaling one of the world's highest peaks? Doing it while making a movie. There are incredible sights in "Meru," which traces three mountaineers making their way up Meru Pea in the Himalayas, which features a summit known as Shark's Fin (and scarily shaped like same). That's because one of them, Jimmy Chin, was periodically pausing from being on top of the world to take HD video. The images are so awe-inspiring that you might periodically forget that these guys are doing what most would consider to be suicidally crazy.

"Meru" pays a touch of lip service as to why they do this. But it mostly takes for granted that they gotta do what they gotta do, instead showing the skill and (if you will) cautiousness required to put themselves in harm's way.

What they do is nuts but also weirdly understandable — an itch that won't go away, and also something that's about more than being on the top. You'll leave with respect mixed with horror, as well as with your eyelids exhausted from gawking, wide-eyed, at so many impressive sights. MP

'Diary' is an empathetic study of teen horniness

MATT PRIGGE
@mattprigge
matt.prigge@metro.us

Kristen Wiig, Bel Powley and Alexander Skarsgard are engaged in a bizarre love triangle in "The Diary of a Teenage Girl," out Friday. SONY PICTURES CLASSICS

Generally — and with good reason — we tend to view age-inappropriate relationships as wrong, especially when one of the lovers is a teen. "The Diary of a Teenage Girl" entertains the idea that maybe they aren't all bad — to a point, at least.

Based on a semiautobiographical book by Phoebe Gloeckner that's part graphic novel, part diary, it details the affair between a high schooler, Minnie (Bel Powley), and Monroe (Alexander Skarsgard), a strapping 30-something. To make matters worse, he's dating her mom, Charlotte (Kristen Wiig). It's all very Bad Idea Jeans, and yet Monroe, charmingly played by Skarsgard, isn't a slimy predator, and, skeevy though it all is, he and Minnie make a more compatible couple than he and her mom. It won't last but, for a time, their love offers a comfortable, rewarding oblivion like any other satisfying-yet-doomed relationship.

Granted, "Diary" isn't just a film about teen horniness; it's a subjective missive beaming from the mind of a young woman dealing messily with messy feelings. In its final stretch, "Teenage Girl" comes close to being one of those reactionary salvos that seems sex-positive only to ultimately punish its protagonist(s) for cutting loose. The pat conclusion, complete with narration about What I Learned, does, however, arrive after nearly two hours of emotional chaos, showing real empathy toward youthful pulchritude and mature pulchritude alike. The movie captures the way that, especially as youths, we like to tear ourselves down, build anew, then start all over again. And it captures how adults do the same thing.

The League vs. Sparkology

Looking to date a CEO? Try to get into The League. ISTOCK

Plenty of websites and dating apps let elitists disseminate details like school pedigree immediately — even apps such as Hinge and Coffee Meets Bagel give prominent placement to daters' schools and workplaces. But Sparkology and The League are unabashed about who makes the cut: Accomplished professionals only.

The scoop on Sparkology

The good: It's true that most of the men on Sparkology have "good" jobs. I saw many doctors, lawyers, engineers and bankers on the site.

The bad: Where do I begin? The site, which is expensive at $25-$50 a month for women, is not something I would even use for free. It's janky: It looks like something from the "You've Got Mail" era. It supposedly syncs with your Facebook so you can see if you share mutual friends with the people you see on the site. Cool — except it doesn't work.

The profiles are superweird. People put up photos of things instead of themselves. And the users also skew older — lots of men in their 40s and 50s.

The bottom line: I wasn't feeling the spark. Skip this one.

All about The League

This one, for now only in New York and San Francisco, is for alpha males and females. They don't literally say that, but they may as well. Founder Amanda Bradford told me that the app has a high number of Ivy League-educated users. Twelve percent of users are CEOs or company founders, and 28 percent are directors in their industries. But "it's less about the school and more about the total package," Bradford explained.

The app is hot, hot, hot right now — there are more than 100,000 people on the wait list across the country. Screeners from The League review every profile they receive.

The good: Many League members are highly educated (nearly half have advanced degrees) and accomplished, and the app syncs up with both Facebook and LinkedIn to make sure users aren't inflating their creds. Members sending creepy/inappropriate messages will get kicked off. Users (who skew toward late 20s/early 30s) can only swipe right or left so many times per day, so it gives you some options without the overwhelming crush of infinite profiles, like Tinder.

The bad: This app is a haven for bros. I've never seen so many tanks and shirtless shots on boats. It's not necessarily a bad thing, but some more diversity wouldn't hurt. The app is slow and buggy. Pictures take a while to load and the app itself takes a while to load.

The bottom line: Try it when it comes to Philadelphia — if you can get in, that is. But, Bradford warned, remember that it's a smaller pool: Don't expect a one-stop shop where you meet lots of people at a quick pace.

Get ready to 'Fear the Walking Dead'

Fans of "The Walking Dead" have some new zombies to love.

LISA WEIDENFELD
@LisaWeidenfeld
lisa.weidenfeld@metro.us

You're ready for some more zombies in your life, right? That's what AMC is betting on with the premiere this weekend of "Fear the Walking Dead," the prequel/spinoff of "The Walking Dead." The new show stars Kim Dickens ("Gone Girl") and Cliff Curtis ("Whale Rider") as they try to figure out what's going on before they accidentally get their brains eaten. It's a real risk, because "Fear the Walking Dead" is about the beginning of the zombie apocalypse, before anyone knows about zombies. Here's what you can expect.

1 You won't be any less freaked out. Knowing what's going to happen doesn't make the events less scary. If anything, it's all the more anxiety-inducing because you're watching a group of people who don't know they should be scared. No one has any reason to think that dark buildings, or shambling strangers, could be something more sinister, and they engage with all the blind confidence of the zombie-free.

See the premiere this Sunday at 8 p.m. on AMC. JUSTIN LUBIN, AMC

2 Survival of the fittest hasn't occurred yet. Rick Grimes of "The Walking Dead" was a former cop, tough, smart and competent, and many of the people he meets up with are just as weathered and canny. But in "Fear the Walking Dead," everyone is still alive and not prepared to fight for their lives. The two leads are a guidance counselor and an English teacher, respectively. There are kind nurses, sulky teenagers and, notably, drug addicts. Much of the action in the premiere takes place through the eyes of Nick (Frank Dillane), a young heroin addict who can't even be sure he should believe what's happening to him.

3 It's just as gruesome as the original series. If all of that makes you think you're watching some sad drama with no action, rest assured — this is still a "Walking Dead" show. There's gore from the very beginning, kill shots in the pilot and all the half-torn-away faces any zombie fan could desire.

Aries Keep your comments to yourself, regardless of how hard that is. You will end up in a compromising position if you step in the middle.

Taurus Focus on your finances. A new project or a side business will turn out to be profitable. Work hard and do your best.

Gemini Romance is evident. Make plans for a special rendezvous. If single, you will meet someone intriguing. Get your work out of the way.

Cancer Don't let anyone emotionally blackmail you. You will be more respected if you stand up for yourself and your principles.

Leo Cultivate friendships with co-workers. Seminars and meetings will be excellent opportunities to find potential allies.

Virgo Don't be afraid to try something different. A new approach will result in a significant change. You can raise your earning power.

Libra You will feel emotionally challenged. Use your energy wisely and put your effort into creative outlets that bring you joy.

Scorpio Question the motives of someone who is trying very hard to get on your good side. It's likely that this person is trying to undermine you.

Sagittarius You can make a difference. Donate your time and energy to helping those in need. You will receive positive recognition.

Capricorn Maintain a balance between your personal and professional responsibilities. Divide your time and attention wisely.

Aquarius You can get a lot done if you start early. Rank your tasks in order of importance to avoid wasting time. Don't bother asking others for help.

Pisces Rather than complain about a situation, figure out a way to change it. You have the power in yourself to make improvements. EUGENIA LAST

Back to sweet basics

Jessica Nolen bakes up nostalgia with the dessert menu at Whetstone.

RACHEL VIGODA
@rachelatmetro
rachel.vigoda@metro.us

Chef Jeremy Nolen swears he's not a dessert person. But his pastry chef wife knows better.

"He'll say he doesn't like dessert, but he comes home late at night and he'll have his dessert snack," says Jessica Nolen, who works alongside her husband at the new Whetstone Tavern in Queen Village. "When I was practicing the peanut butter chocolate cake at home, he took a bite — and I could tell he didn't want to let me know he was really excited about it."

The Whetstone team is known for Brauhaus Schmitz, nearby on South Street. But the new restaurant is a departure from the German cuisine Jeremy creates at Brauhaus, with more of a classic American tavern menu. Jessica designed her nostalgic dessert list to complement the savory side. (The couple has been complementing each other in the kitchen since they met in 2007 working in the former Coquette, in the same space that Whetstone is in now.)

She'll soon be making the pastries and bread for both Whetstone and Brauhaus from her upcoming Little Bird Bakery and Cafe at 517 S. Fifth St., a block away from Whetstone. It's slated to open in October.

You've been working together for a while. Does collaborating always go smoothly?

Jeremy and Jessica Nolen JASON VARNEY

It's all I know! I was really young when we started working together — it was my first chef job. Jeremy guided me, he had been [a chef] for a long time and he's incredibly talented. Now I consult with him, we discuss things, but he trusts me to get the job done.

Do you guys have a similar approach to cooking?

We do, it's really seamless. We have a similar style so it works really well: nonpretentious, good food that looks nice on the plate.

How does the rustic, casual feel of Whetstone come across in the dessert menu?

It's the same type of feeling. We took things that people can relate to — Jeremy did it with his part of the menu and I reflected that in the dessert menu. We have apple pie — everyone loves apple pie. It's nostalgic. Lemon meringue. Strawberry rhubarb. The only thing I put in the dessert menu that isn't a familiar dish to people is a maple custard pie. It's like a maple syrup custard baked in a sugar cookie crust. But still, the maple flavor hits into that nostalgic aspect.

Are you planning to change the dessert menu seasonally?

We'll see what people really love. That's what we did at Brauhaus — there were some things we were like, "OK, we cannot take this off the menu, ever." But we'll change it as we move from the warm months to the winter months. And then we'll have people excited when we bring something back.

So what's the best dessert on the menu right now? What should everyone order?

That's so tough! The maple pie, it's not a typical thing you'll see everywhere, everyone should try that. But I can never stop eating the lemon meringue cheesecake. I'm like, "Oh no, I cut this piece wrong! I should probably just eat it."

A toast to Diner en Blanc

Of course you'll want to pick up a bottle (or three) of white to go with your all-white outfit for tonight's exclusive pop-up dinner party. We asked local wine experts for recommendations that go beyond our usual system of "which label is prettiest." And sorry, suds sippers — no beer allowed. RACHEL VIGODA

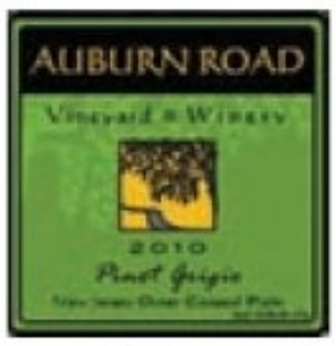
Size matters

Paradocx Vineyard 3L Cans

"One bottle is not enough for your group of friends at Diner en Blanc, but more than one bottle is impossible to carry along with your picnic accessories," says Jaclyn Poole of Pinot Boutique in Old City. "Here's your solution: the Paradocx Vineyard 3L Cans, available in chardonnay or white-wash, a special blend of white grape varietals."

Crowd-pleaser

Auburn Road Pinot Grigio



"Pinot grigio is always a crowd-pleaser and, in our opinion, the best wine for a night outside watching the stars and enjoying a meal with 1,000 of your closest friends," Poole says. "Auburn Road's is a crisp, light white wine with beautiful fruit and a floral aroma."

Picnic perfect

Etude Chardonnay Estate Grown Grace Benoist Ranch

Andrew Tyson, retail wine specialist at the Fine Wine & Good Spirits state store at 20th and Market, calls this chardonnay "a perfect picnic wine — it isn't heavy on the oak and is wonderfully smooth across the palate with a beautiful weight to it," he describes.

A little sparkle

La Marca Prosecco

Prosecco bubbles are like Champagne but just a bit sweeter. "This prosecco is dry with a slightly creamy texture and flavors of lemon and white peach," says Tyson. "It can be enjoyed alone but has great acidity, which lends itself well to pairing with a variety of foods."

Crisp and clean

Clean Slate Rielsing

Grapes taken from vineyards up and down the slopes of the Mosel Valley in Germany give this off-dry riesling its balanced taste. "[It's] fresh and clean and perfect for a hot summer day," Tyson says. "It's super-refreshing, light and crisp with minerally lemon and lime tones."

Scotland's historic distilleries

Scotland didn't invent alcohol, though it might as well have done it, given the number of historic distilleries there are to visit.

Who gets the title "Scotland's oldest distillery" is open to argument, as historical records are not always clear — and it also depends on your criteria. But here are six of the oldest that can still be visited, in alphabetical order.

Balblair

Balblair in Ross-shire was founded in 1790, but the present buildings date to 1895, when it was rebuilt. As well as touring the distillery, you can choose one of their whiskies to fill your own bottle and add your own label. www.balblair.com

Blair Athol

Based in Pitlochry, the picturesque village known as the gateway to the Highlands, Blair Athol was started in 1798 under the name Aldour. www.discovering-distilleries.com/blairathol

Bowmore

Bowmore dates back to 1779 and was the first of many distilleries on the island of Islay off the west coast of Scotland — and eight of them are still open! www.bowmore.com

Glen Garioch

Glen Garioch in Aberdeenshire prints its 1797 foundation date on every bottle, but there are records showing it was in operation as early as 1785. You can find out more on a distillery visit. www.glengarioch.com

Glenturret

Glenturret in Crieff claims to be Scotland's oldest distillery, thanks to a license dating from 1775. It closed for a long period due to the effects of prohibition, but it came back and is well-known for The Famous Grouse. experience.thefamousgrouse.com

Strathisla

Strathisla's claim to fame is that it remains the oldest continuously operating distillery in Scotland. It retains many of its original buildings and was founded in 1786 in Keith. www.maltwhiskydistilleries.com

Beyond the whisky

It may be hard to believe, but there are Scottish distilleries that don't make whisky! Gin has become increasingly popular. Here are four of Scotland's top gins.

The Botanist: Made by Bruichladdich on Islay, where there are eight malt whisky distilleries, this gin uses 22 foraged island botanicals. www.thebotanist.com

Edinburgh Gin: Edinburgh now has its own gin distillery. Various tours are available, as well as the chance to make your own gin. www.edinburghgindistillery.co.uk

Crossbill: Crossbill claims to be the only Scottish gin using 100 percent Scottish juniper, helping to revive the country's juniper business. The gin is made on the Inshriach Estate in Aviemore. www.crossbillgin.com

Caorunn: Made in the traditional whisky heartland of Speyside at the Balmenach Distillery, which dates back to 1824, Caorunn was recently voted one of the world's 10 best gins. www.caorunngin.com

Cruising New York's canals

For a unique way to experience New York's countryside, try a leisurely, self-captained cruise on a flat-bottomed narrowboat.

Erie Canal in Rochester

Colorful and cozy, narrowboats are descendants of the craft that plied the Erie Canal in the 1800s. Back then, power came from teams of mules pulling the barges. Nowadays, diesel engines do the work (but the pace is about the same). You'll meander through some of the loveliest, least developed areas of northern New York at about 7 mph. You set your own itinerary, visiting towns and museums, biking to wineries or just drifting along and savoring the scenery. Towns along the canal have public docks with a low tie-up fee, if any.

Narrowboats sleep up to six people and are self-contained with fully equipped kitchens, linens and towels, and necessary fuel and nautical gear. If you really can't stand being unplugged, some boats have Wi-Fi. Novice mariners get complete instructions on driving the boats, navigating the canals and managing the locks. Lockmasters are used to helping newbies quickly pick up the procedures. Kids love the whole adventure.

> Float alongside some of the least developed areas at a leisurely pace.

The New York State Canal System website (www.canals.ny.gov) has a lot of information, as do the four listed boat rental operators who specialize in narrowboats.

Erie Canal Cruise Lines (www.canalcruises.com) specializes in trips along the Erie Canal and the Finger Lakes. Erie-Champlain Canal Boat Company (www.eccboating.com) offers routes along the Erie Canal or north to Lake Champlain. They also have day trips along the canal in Waterford.

Low Bridge Charters (www.lowbridgecharters.com) also focuses on the Erie Canal; their staff helps plan itineraries to ensure those new to the experience don't miss anything. Mid-Lakes Navigation (www.macedonlanding.com) has various-size boats for trips along the Erie and Cayuga-Seneca canals, as well as day trips from downtown Syracuse.

Phils deal Utley to LA

MLB. The Phillies dealt their longtime second baseman to the Dodgers on Wednesday.

Chase Utley drove in at least 100 runs per year from 2005-08. / GETTY IMAGES

Another key figure from the Phillies' 2008 World Series championship team is out the door as the team traded second baseman Chase Utley to the Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday, according to CBS Sports.

The Phillies will pick up two minor leaguers in the deal.

The 36-year-old Utley is a shell of what he once was, but has been hot at the plate of late — going 15 for 31 since returning from an ankle injury.

Utley had been with the Phillies his entire career prior to Wednesday's deal. The Long Beach, California, native made six All-Star teams and was a four-time Silver Slugger Award winner in Philadelphia. He drove in at least 100 runs per year from 2005-08 and belted a pair of home runs in the Phillies' 2008 World Series victory over the Tampa Bay Rays.

The Dodgers will now employ the Phillies' old double-play duo of Utley and Jimmy Rollins. Los Angeles second baseman Howie Kendrick is battling a left hamstring injury, which put the Dodgers in the Utley market.

Detroit's Ameer Abdullah impressed last week against the Jets. / GETTY IMAGES

TRAINING CAMP RISERS ALWAYS WORTH A LOOK

The box scores from preseason games are meaningless. However, tracking the depth chart changes and injuries that go on at training camp is invaluable.

As we approach the one-month mark of camp, we can begin to see who is emerging and who is falling behind. Move these guys up your draft boards.

Double-A

Rookie Ameer Abdullah announced himself to the mainstream NFL world in the first preseason game, jumping off the screen with freakish lateral quickness and unique burst. Meanwhile, Joique Bell (knee, ankle) hasn't practiced with his teammates since the 2014 season. At the very least, Abdullah will be in an even timeshare with Bell come Week 1. There's upside for a lot more though, as Bell is clearly not healthy and is coming off back-to-back sub-4.0 YPC seasons anyway. Abdullah's ADP is unfortunately spiking thanks to his performance, but he is still worth a fourth-round pick as a versatile, explosive and athletic specimen.

TYROD TAYLOR
GETTY IMAGES

Taking option 3

Kenny Stills is gone, Jimmy Graham is gone and Marques Colston is on his last legs. That means whoever wins the No. 3 receiver for Drew Brees is going to get his chances, even if this version of the Saints' offense will be far more conservative than what we're used to. The man who has bubbled to the front of the competition is Brandon Coleman, who has been lining up with Colston and Brandin Cooks in three-receiver sets throughout training camp. A raw but intriguing 6-foot-6 prospect with 4.5 speed, Coleman has drawn Colston comparisons from Sean Payton. Deep leaguers need to have him on their radars.

Camp risers

A glance at a few more players who have excelled at camp.

- Eddie Royal, Bears — Tearing up camp and now has a clear path to tons of targets with Kevin White (shin surgery) down.
- David Cobb, Titans — Set to earn some first-team reps after looking powerful and decisive in the preseason opener.
- Kamir Aiken, Ravens — Continues to soak up first-team reps. Only behind an injured rookie in Breshad Perriman and 36-year-old Steve Smith.

Getting leggy

Tyrod Taylor is a subaverage NFL thrower. But he's an elite runner, as evidenced by his 36-237-0 rushing line over his last 280 preseason snaps and 9-65-1 production in his only real regular season chance (2012 Week 17).

With E.J. Manuel on the mat, Taylor only needs to beat out Matt Cassel for the Week 1 starting job in Buffalo. If that happens, he'll be an underrated fantasy asset thanks to those legs. Remember that Tim Tebow was fantasy's No. 18 quarterback in 2011 even though he only started 11 games. And Tebow makes Taylor look like Joe Montana when it comes to throwing.

NFL news

Chris Johnson is beyond the point of making a significant impact on an NFL roster. But the fact that the Cardinals brought him back from the grave is another sign they're not fully content with Andre Ellington as their every-down runner.

Just a few months ago, Bruce Arians used a third-round pick on an Ellingtonish back in David Johnson. Ellington can still have plenty of value in PPR formats, but expect 12-15 touches per game instead of the 20.5 he received last year.

3 Things to watch for as Eagles host the Ravens

NFL All eyes will be on Sam Bradford Saturday night.

The Eagles and Ravens' four-day adventure reaches a climax Saturday night at 7 when the two will face off at Lincoln Financial Field in the team's Week 2 preseason game after three sessions of joint practices.

And while the contest is, of course, an exhibition, there is a lot at stake for the Eagles as they prepare to potentially, finally, exceed expectations in the Chip Kelly regime.

Here are a trio of reasons to make the prime-time Saturday game a part of your weekend viewing experience.

Sam Bradford is expected to see plenty of action against Baltimore. / GETTY IMAGES

1 Sam Bradford
By deciding to sit Sam Bradford during the Eagles' first preseason game versus the Colts last week, Kelly raised the stakes exponentially for the quarterback in his debut. Kelly took a big chance not only surrendering Nick Foles and a draft pick to get the highly paid and oft-injured former Heisman Trophy winner, but he is also betting his team's entire season on Bradford making a full recovery from ACL surgery last fall. Bradford has done everything a healthy quarterback needs to do during practice and has shown off his accurate arm on several occasions. But as he said last week, you never know until you face a live defense, with full contact and with pads on. "I need to get back on the field and get those reps," Bradford said. "It's been a long time since I have taken live team reps."

2 The 1s versus the 1s
Historically, the No. 1 offensive and defensive squads on NFL teams get more playing time in the second preseason game. And since DeMarco Murray didn't play at all, and most of the first team played little more than two series against the Colts, it will be nice to see the Eagles' top players on the field together. The Ravens offer a tough matchup for the Eagles in a number of areas, and will be a good tune-up and measuring stick for the team going forward. I think [it's good] any time you get a chance to compete against another team, when you have players like Steve Smith out there at receiver and Joe Flacco, who is one of the best in the league," Kelly said in advance of Baltimore coming to town. "You've got [Terrell] Suggs and [Elvis] Dumervil and that group on the outside linebackers and defensive line in terms of pass rush. So that will be some good matchups with our offensive line. I think the competition part of it is what we are real excited about."

3 Roster battles
The Eagles have a lot of depth, but their deepest positions are the ones that are seeing the most-heated position battles take place. In the secondary, aside from Malcolm Jenkins and Byron Maxwell, no one's role is really solidified. Eric Rowe, a rookie cornerback, looks poised to play in the nickel while Walter Thurmond and Nolan Carroll will likely be starters in some capacity. But the rest of the secondary is a battlefield, with a long list of talented young players fighting for spots.
